Kampung Akuarium (Kampong) is located in North Jakarta and was a very high-dense urban squatter area.

This place is dominated by immigrant that particularly came from Java island. Historically, this place was located in a region called Sunda Kelapa and was settlement of The Indonesian Academy of Sciences (LIPI) worker. After year 1978, the area continuously changed functionally; a dormitory of police officers and eventually was abandoned and sold to the immigrant. The people come hoping for better opportunity coming to Jakarta, their occupation is not only as a fisherman, but also port labor.

After the arrival of the immigrants, changes in urban form was slowly settling as a slum settlement. In year of 2015 the former governor of Jakarta, Kampung Akuarium was once focused revitalized as a new urban settlement, what makes it more debatable is the plan is not implemented for particular reason and now handed over to the new rezim. The latest governor is currently planning to do another development through community-based planning.
